REFERENCES

Since Official Records and Documents regarding burials in the Church’s Graveyard are not existent; the following are useful in providing information regarding the Grave Yard.

1. Touring the Tombstones, A guide to Charleston’s Historic Church yards. St. Mary’s Roman Catholic Church. One of a series. A professionally printed multi-colored, compact document by Pamela D. Gabriel and Ruth M. Miller, copyright 2006 and still available at a modest cost. The Guide provides an overview of the Church’s history and grave markers. Also included are-Bishop England’s address “concerning the disasters (1838 epidemic) besetting St. Mary’s” and biography of the prominent stone marker White family who provided a number of tombstones and the iconography that adorns several of their products at St. Mary’s.

2. Little Black Book; cited in Touring the Tombstones as a “unique treasure”. Commingled in this register, thought have been prepared by a Parishioner, hand drawn sketches. 1924, 25, 26 Burials. Many of the markers included * can no longer be found. Hand written Indexed alphabetical listing.

3. Find A Grave Internet site. Data furnished by contributors to the site. Contains an alphabetized Listings, reference memorial numbers, inscriptions, photos, and memorials..

5. Tombstone Inscriptions presented by the University of South Carolina to the South Carolina Historical Society. WPA inscription records presented in order surveyed. Very Useful to find deceased where inscriptions have been obliterated or worn away. Includes slabs inside Church and vestibule stone wall markers.

6. Alphabetical Listing of WPA Inscriptions. 26 pages. Source unknown. Numbering refers to page number such as 17.167. Includes foot stones. Contains age, year of death and country of origin

Even though there are numerous errors, omissions, and duplications in these references the contributions of those preparing such large quantities of data is recognized and honored.

8. Informational Articles from Find A Grave Internet Site- relating to cleaning and restoration of markers.
